

The IVFN chosen by Fertility Network UK to lead Fertility in the Workplace Programme, Expanding Support for Employers and Employees Across the UK

London, UK: 6th July 2026 – The IVFN, the UK's leading reproductive health and fertility platform, has announced that it has been chosen to continue and develop the Fertility in the Workplace programme from Fertility Network UK.

This marks an important milestone and an exciting new chapter in the evolution of workplace fertility support in the UK. Under The IVFN's leadership, Fertility in the Workplace will continue its mission of raising awareness, improving education, and helping employers create inclusive, compassionate workplaces for those experiencing fertility challenges.

Infertility affects one in six people globally and can have a profound impact on employees' mental health, wellbeing, productivity and career progression. Yet fertility remains one of the least understood and least supported health issues in the workplace.

The IVFN will build on the strong foundations established by Fertility Network UK by further developing the programme's offering, including workplace education, fertility policies, manager training, employee resources and employer accreditation initiatives.

Charlotte Gentry, Founder and CEO of The IVFN, said:

"Fertility challenges can affect every aspect of a person's life, including their experience at work. We are honoured to take forward the incredible work that Fertility Network UK has achieved through Fertility in the Workplace. Our ambition is to ensure that every employee feels seen, supported and empowered, and that every employer has the knowledge and tools to create truly inclusive workplace cultures."

The IVFN's expanded employer offering already provides businesses with access to fertility education, expert-led workshops, policy development and reproductive health resources such as free consultations with the number one private fertility clinicians in the sector worth £6000 and a huge community support forum. The support is designed to improve employee wellbeing, engagement and retention.

As part of this new chapter, existing resources and support available through Fertility In the Workplace will continue, while The IVFN will introduce new initiatives that reflect the changing needs of today's workforce and the increasing demand for comprehensive reproductive health support in the workplace.

The IVFN believes that supporting fertility in the workplace is not only the right thing to do for employees but also makes sound business sense. Organisations that foster open conversations around fertility and reproductive health are better positioned to attract and retain talent, improve employee engagement and strengthen their diversity, equity and inclusion strategies.

Further announcements regarding new programmes, partnerships and employer resources will be made in the coming months.

For further information, please contact:

Charlotte Gentry

CEO

The IVFN

Email: charlotte@theivfn.com

Website: www.theivfn.com

About The IVFN

The IVFN is a leading reproductive health and fertility platform providing trusted information, expert guidance, free consultations with the top fertility experts and a supportive community for individuals navigating fertility and reproductive health challenges. Through its employer services, The IVFN partners with organisations to create inclusive workplaces that support fertility, family-building and reproductive wellbeing.